status of PhilID, delayed delivery of PhilID cards, and incorrect demographic entries. They also distributed PhilSys Information, Education, and Communication (IEC) campaign materials.

The activity served as a one-stop-shop where government agencies, private companies, tech-voc institutions and financing institutions converged to offer employment, training, competency assessment, and financial assistance to Technical-Vocational Education Training (TVET) graduates/alumni. It also served as job fair wherein it aimed to provide opportunity for Abreños, especially for TVET graduates, to explore potential employment. The activity was a good venue for the PSA Abra to bring the services closer to the people.
